The government's direct tax collection grew 41.3% on year to 3.55 trln rupees in Apr-Jun, Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary said in reply to a question in Parliament. The collection of indirect tax, which includes custom duty, excise duty, service tax, and GST, grew 9.4% on year to 3.44 trln rupees in the first quarter of the current financial year. "Various factors like rapid economic recovery post-COVID-19, better compliances due to various measures taken by the government have contributed to this increase,". The government releases detailed tax collection figures with a lag of one month. The Budget had projected the central government's gross tax collections in 2022-23 (Apr-Mar) at 27.58 trln rupees, up 9.6% from the revised estimate for the financial year ended March. Finance minister Nirmala Sitharaman said that the trust-based taxation system introduced by the government has resulted in improved collections and increased return filings. In her message on the 163rd Income Tax Day, the finance minister complimented the department for achieving the highest-ever revenue collection of over Rs 14 lakh crore in the last fiscal and expressed hope that the momentum would continue in the current fiscal too. Direct tax collections surged to Rs 14.09 lakh crore in 2021-22, registering a year-on-year growth of 49.02 per cent on the back of strong growth in mop-up from individual and corporation tax. For the current fiscal, the government has projected the direct tax collection at Rs 14.20 lakh crore. The finance minister said the government has addressed several legacy issues and removed structural deficiencies related to direct taxes to foster ease of living and doing business. The reforms introduced by the government in recent years have ensured a trust-based tax system. "The taxpayers on their part have vindicated this trust-based approach as evident from the trend of improved tax collections and increase in the number of income tax returns filed.

'E-com grievance cases up 30-40% in 4-5 years'

AGENCIES
New Delhi

Cases of grievances related to e-commerce have surged 30-40% over the last four-five years, Central Consumer Protection Authority Chief Commissioner Nidhi Khare said at a press conference on Tuesday.

The government wants to ensure that unfair trade practices are not prevalent through e-commerce platforms, as consumers are heavily dependent on such platforms nowadays.

Through the national consumer helpline, consumers are registering complaints, and we are able to identify the area of priority," Khare said, adding that fake and online paid reviews were common in three fields—white goods, food and beverages, and the tour and travel sector.

The government has set up a department for prevention of fake and paid reviews to resolve this matter.

"Central Consumer Protection Authority will take up suo-moto action against manufacturing and sales of consumer durables without Bureau of Indian Standards mark and quality control orders standard," Khare said.

It has taken suo-moto action against unfair trade practices of selling goods that do not comply with mandatory standards.

ONE FOR INSPIRATION

The Envious Boy

There was this boy who always wanted what wasn't his: his friends' toys, his cousins' clothes, his parents' books...he ended up being so envious that even the hairs on his head were given to jealousy. One day a hair on the crown of his head woke up completely green. When the other hairs saw this they became so hugely envious that they too ended up turning green. The next day a hair near his hairline was stained by something blue. Again all the other hairs ended up blue. So, day after day, the boy's hair would completely change colour, driven by boundless envy. One day, this angered him so much that he furiously pulled at his hair. One rather thin hair couldn't endure all the pulling, and it let go; falling to the floor with quite a nice smooth flight. Of course, the other hairs saw this, felt envious, and they all let go too. Within a minute the boy was as bald as an egg, and the look of surprise on his face seemed like a bad joke. The boy understood it had all been a natural consequence of his envy.

GENDER STEREOTYPES NOT PRESERVE OF GROWN-UPS

6-YR-OLDS THINK ONLY MEN CAN BE BRILLIANT!

Children hold stereotypical views that 'brilliance' is a male trait, and this belief strengthens as they grow up to the age of

of brilliance with men, and to probe the relationship between parents and their children's views. The study defined brilliance twelve, researchers have reported. The study led by Nanyang Technological University, Singapore (NTU Singapore) in collaboration with New York University, was published in the scientific journal Child Development in May 2022. It involved 389 Chinese Singaporean parents and 342 of their children aged 8 to 12. Tests were carried out to measure the extent to which parents and their children associate the notion as an exceptional level of intellectual ability and results showed that children are as likely to associate brilliance with men, as their parents are. This belief was stronger among older children and stronger among those children whose parents held the same view. Previous research on gender stereotypes has found the idea that giftedness is a male trait can emerge at around the age of six.

Silence Please!

THERE were once four friends, who were training to become monks. Practising meditation was, therefore, very important for them. Every day, they would sit together in silence in the meditation hall. A single candle would be lit, and they would focus their attention by gazing at its flame.

One day, they decided to take a vow of silence for seven consecutive days in order to discipline their minds. They went to the meditation hall and began their practice. On the first day, all of them meditated silently throughout the day. The candle steadily became smaller as the day passed, and when night fell, it died out. At this, one of the four students exclaimed, "Hey! The candle has gone out. We shall have to tell one of the servants to light another candle."

The second student was shocked to hear him speak. "Have you forgotten your vow?" he blurted. "We are not supposed to speak for seven continuous days. So none of us can speak to any servant."

The third student said to the other two in a patronising tone, "Why did you have to open your mouths? Now you have broken the silence. It will be difficult for me to get back to meditating quietly."

Hearing the three of them speak, the fourth student burst out laughing and said to all of them, "Ha! I win! Because I am the only one who did not speak at all."

The Basics about Cryptocurrency

Cryptocurrency comes under many names. You have probably read about some of the most popular types of cryptocurrencies such as Bitcoin, Litecoin, and Ethereum. Cryptocurrencies are increasingly popular alternatives for online payments. Before converting real dollars, euros, pounds, or other traditional currencies into  $\square$  (the symbol for Bitcoin, the most popular cryptocurrency), you should understand what cryptocurrencies are, what the risks are in using cryptocurrencies, and how to protect your investment.

What is cryptocurrency? A cryptocurrency is a digital currency, which is an alternative form of payment created using encryption algorithms. The use of encryption technologies means that cryptocurrencies function both as a currency and as a virtual accounting system. To use cryptocurrencies, you need a cryptocurrency wallet. These wallets can be software that is a cloud-based service or is stored on your computer or on your mobile device. The wallets are the tool through which you store your encryption keys that confirm your identity and link to your cryptocurrency.

What are the risks of using cryptocurrency? Cryptocurrencies are still relatively new, and the market for these digital currencies is very volatile.

Since cryptocurrencies don't need banks or any other third party to regulate them; they tend to be uninsured and are hard to convert into a form of tangible currency (such as US dollars or euros.) In addition, since cryptocurrencies are technology-based intangible assets, they can be hacked like any other intangible technology asset. Finally, since you store your cryptocurrencies in a digital wallet, if you lose your wallet (or access to it or to wallet backups), you have lost your entire cryptocurrency investment.

Who is Neera Tanden? All you need to know about Indian American likely to be Joe Biden's Budget chief

Indian American Neera Tanden is likely to be named as Joe Biden's Director of the Office of Management and Budget and will be responsible for managing the administration's budget. Several US media publications are backing Neera to take the top job.

Indian American Neera Tanden is likely to be named as Joe Biden's Director of the Office of Management and Budget and will be responsible for managing the administration's budget. Several US media publications are backing Neera to take the top job. The 50-year-old, who is currently the chief executive of the left-leaning Centre for American Progress, would be the first woman of colour to head the Office of Management and Budget.

Tanden's nomination is a part of Biden's plan to build a team of liberal and centrist economic advisers to serve alongside planned Treasury Secretary nominee Janet Yellen, The Wall Street Journal reported on Sunday. Nominations of Tandem, Yellen, and others are expected to be announced soon, multiple news reports said.

According to The Washington Post, Tanden will be under pressure from conservatives to rein in government spending but will probably play an instrumental role in crafting the Biden administration's response to the current economic downturn. He was a close ally of Hillary Clinton, the former secretary of state and the 2016 Democratic presidential candidate, and helped pass the Affordable Care Act under Obama, it said.

"Another proud day for Indian Americans to see Neera Tanden be nominated for a Cabinet-level position in the next administration. This position at OMB is a wide-ranging role with broad powers to manage trillions of dollars of the US budget. If anyone had any doubts that our community has arrived politically, this election cycle is proof enough," M R Rangaswami, founder of nonprofit organization India spora was quoted saying by IANS.

Another first for a woman of colour in Biden's team may be Cecilia Rouse, a Princeton University labor economist. She is likely to be appointed as the chairwoman of Council of Economic Advisers. The African American woman will play a key role in advising the president on the economy, which has been ailing since the coronavirus pandemic struck the country, throwing tens of millions out of work.
